Model of Charity

After a year filled with life-changing events, Tominaga Ai is now looking forward to 2012. One of the world's top fashion models, Tominaga, 29, was appointed as an ambassador of the Japanese Organization for International Cooperation in Family Planning (JOICFP), an NGO whose aim is to assist pregnant women and mothers in Africa, where maternal mortality rates are particularly high. The mother of a six-year-old son herself, she visited Zambia in November of 2010 to observe how donations were used. (Paragraph 1)

Before her trip, Tominaga had a rather negative view of Africa. She assumed that local people's lives were a struggle. Instead, she discovered lots of cheerful upbeat people living their lives to the fullest. "Somehow, I felt nostalgic. And I realized that the mothers there were strong and fun to be with. They cheered me up." (Paragraph 2)

"I want to help people and help make the world a better place. (), I have been attending many events such as Mode for Charity and have gladly allowed my name and appearances to be used for good causes." (Paragraph 3)

Not long after returning to Japan, another event changed her life to a similar extent: the March 11 disaster in Tohoku. Three months after the disaster, Tominaga visited Kamaishi, Iwate Prefecture, which was affected by the earthquake and tsunami. She mingled with workers at the city's health and welfare facility. She was moved by their devotion and eagerness to help others. During her visit, she came to realize that people care for others, even in tough times. (Paragraph 4) Tominaga will be going to Africa again this year as the JOICFP ambassador, this time to Tanzania. "I am looking forward to seeing more of Africa and sharing stories with our supporters," she says, smiling. By channeling^{*} her popularity and creating a sense of goodwill, Tominaga will continue making a difference in many people's lives in 2012. (Paragraph 5)
